

Caution, Viewer Discretion Advised: For many pet parents these pictures are disturbing, shocking and revealing. We ask that you use strong discretion when viewing these pictures.

Paws To Angels is a proud member of Pet Loss Professionals Alliance (PLPA). They were organized in 2009 through International Cemetery, Cremation & Funeral Association (ICCFA) to bring standards across the US in our pets death care. Seeing that each and every pet is treated with Dignity and Respect. Paws To Angels is championing pet-death care industry service standards in order to assure that the dignified treatment of pet's mortal remains becomes the norm, not the exception.

This is a picture of Sony, resting peacefully with respect to his body with his blanket and favorite toys at the Paws To Angels Center before cremation. Paws To Angels provides immediate care to every family there are no truck routes. Each and every pet is cared for in this way and never frozen, before final arrangements are carried out.

This picture of pets in a freezer stacked on top one another; picture taken at a veterinarian's office of pets waiting for a truck route to come around before cremation. This is also how many crematoriums and cemetery's hold the pets before the final arrangements are carried out.

Paws To Angels transporting only one pet at a time to the center with respect and dignity to the pet and the family. Transportation is immediate, transferring the same respect and dignity to the veterinarians office.

These are pictures of pets being picked up on a truck route. They are piled together, on top of one another; many clinics are stopped at before returning to the crematorium. Vans are used mostly so you are unable to see this.

Paws To Angels sees that each and every pet's remains are treated with love, respect, and dignity. The remains from a private cremation that a family would like interred or if a family has chosen communal cremation the pet's remains are interred in this Pet Ossuary at Graceland Park Cemetery, where standards governing human burial govern the pets interred here – they forever rest in peace. A place to honor our beloved pets!

All too often pet cremated remains or remains are disposed of in landfills, or trash bins. Pet parents and veterinarians alike are unaware this kind of activity is happening across the United States. Many times when the pet is cremated in a communal cremation the remains are discarded in this fashion or on land that has not been deemed perpetual. The remains can be dug up, built upon and the land sold with no regard to the family.

Birdie during the complimentary visitation service Paws To Angels offers every family. A chance to see them at peace, giving you a beautiful lasting memory. A chance for another pat on the head and an I love you. An opportunity for children and other pets in the home to say their goodbyes. This is a very healthy way in dealing with you grief.